Atienza, Drilon in talks to unify Liberal Party

By Winata Calameza, Inquirer
Newport News, and Norman
Bordabera

BAKUR-CITY—ENVIRONMENT
Lawrence Lim Drilon, who leads a pro-environment faction of the Liberal Party, has begun behind-the-scenes negotiations with former Sen. Franklin Drilon to unify the party behind a single presidential ticket in the 2010 presidential election.

LP stalwart Eusebio Quinsac, who came here with Atienza to grace this year's annual mining safety conference, confirmed that Atienza and Drilon remained talks "only as a result."

Both Atienza and Quinsac said the 2010 presidential election was a "good opportunity" for the LP to increase its political dominance.

Drilon, whose faction was recognized by the Supreme Court after months of internal strife, also faced a unity talks proposal in a Quezon City forum. He said he had notified Atienza-faction members of the party's national executive committee meeting tomorrow to hand over the party's leadership to him. Mac Arana, an ex-therapist best known for the presidency.

Good feedback

Romulo visited this city recently with barbers who entertained members at the Baguio public market to tell behind a "Baka for President" campaign.

Romulo has refused to comment about his aspirations.

The good feedback from Romulo's provincial visits has encouraged the LP faction to talk, Quinsac said.

Long time coming

"It's been so long since the LP had a president in office. The last president we installed was Romulo Macapagal," Quinsac said in Pili-pino, Managapal, father of President Macapagal-Arroyo, once over Nacababata Party candidate Carlos P. Garcia in 1971 on an anti-graft platform.

One condition is not want to lose this chance so they are exerting every effort... That's why this issue of our ally should be addressed," he said. Quinsac said there was a possibility the administration coalition's best for president may come from LP's pool of potential candidates.

Which, however, remains to be discussed between the two factions.

Drilon said yesterday the LP will be a "stand-alone party" that may ally itself with a coalition instead of being part of the anti-Arroyo alliance.

Drilon and other LP leaders appeared at the weekly Baguio in a talk forum to discuss how the party's messaging that would elect Romulo to the presidency.

Drilon said, however, that the issue of who would be the vice presidential candidate of the party had yet to be discussed.

"We're open to alliances," the outgoing party leader said.

By said this was the case in the last election when the LP allied itself with the United Opposition instead of being part of the anti-Arroyo alliance.

Appointed by Roxas

Roxas is now the executive vice-president of the party.

The other officers, Drilon said, will be appointed by Roxas after he is elected head of the party.

"That's the reason that we are electing him the party president is to give him the chance if he decides to run for President, he will have the full weight and support of the party," said former Subic Bay Mayor Romulo Macapagal, a former LP president.

Split into two

The LP party belonged to Mac Arana's coalition last night into two factions in the wake of the "Baka for President" campaign launched in 2008.

Drilon drove the LP behind the scenes to maintain the unity of the party.

Atienza and some other LP hard leaders, however, rallied behind the independent Mac Arana. Later, they held a "unity" session and "unity" Drilon as party president.

This led to prolonged factional strife in the party.

The Asian Network of Major Cities (ANMC)

Convenes Tomorrow (Nov. 26) For Its 6th Plenary Meeting in Manila

Major Asian Cities to Meet and Discuss Global Warming, Urbanity

Metropolitan Manila plays host tomorrow (Nov. 26) to the 6th Plenary Meeting of the Asian Network of Major Cities 21 (ANMC) that will bring to fore the pressing issues of urbanity and global warming, among other things.

Seven member Asian cities have conferred attendance with the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority, the event organizers, to attend the ANMC meeting which is expected to bring at least 60 delegates from 11 Asian countries namely Bangkok, Delhi, Hanoi, Jakarta, Kuala Lumpur, Manila, Osaka, Seoul, Singapore, Taipei, Tokyo and Yungang, to Manila for a two-day conference.

The annual meeting is scheduled from Nov. 26 to Nov. 27, 2007 at the Sofitel Philippine Plaza.

For six years now, the conference has served as venue for ANMC 21 member cities to synchronously discuss regional issues affecting the environment, health, travel and tourism, and urban development.

MMDA Chairman Bayan Fernando said the hosting of the international conference would also give Metro Manila a new opportunity to showcase its positive attributes as well as promote the country as a favorable site for tourism, trade and investments.

"We are preparing for this important event that will provide Metro Manila the rare privilege to host 60 heads of cities from all over Asia. This, only, I can say that the conference has all the attributes of success," Fernando said.

With a theme, "Diversity: A United Diversity" as its theme, the ANMC meeting is a policy dialogue on the theme, featuring presentations from Bangkok, Manila and Taipei delegates, and an ensuing discussion among all member cities.

"The theme is very timely from a regional perspective. The Asian economy is slowly, more specifically, the prospects for the ANMC 21 member cities, including Metro Manila, are as bullish as ever. But while each city pursues its own growth, it is also facing the rise of regionalism. Countries in Asia are coming together to drive the region's overall growth. For our part, the ANMC 21 members believe that each member-city should support each other's growth. And we intend to explore different ways of doing it through the plenary meeting," Fernando said.

Global warming is another pressing concern that the ANMC member-cities intend to address at the plenary conference because they said Asia has been preoccupied with urban development and management and has not been able to forecast the negative impact on the environment.

The discussion on global warming will consist of reports from Manila, Tokyo, Delhi, Jakarta and Seoul, to be followed by a discussion among the member-cities.

The plenary meeting will conclude with the drafting and signing of a declaration that embodies the ANMC 21 consensus on the issues included. The Manila declaration is expected to include directions in addressing these five primary concerns.

No additional featuring the member cities of the SM Mall of Asia will run concurrently with the plenary meeting. It will be opened for public viewing on Nov. 24, 2007. The Asian Performing Arts Festival will also be held in conjunction with the ANMC 21 from Nov. 25 to Nov. 21, 2007, also at the SM Mall of Asia.

Fernando said Metro Manila's strong commitment to the ideals of ANMC 21 to foster cooperation, peace, security and stability among cities in Asia make the factors that made the Philippines clutch the hosting honors of the plenary meeting.

not just focus on sick people but on a sick society as well and he would like doctors to address this "dysconnection."

Measles

In the Philippines there is a mismatch of doctors and society and there must be a way to "reconnect" them, he said.

"The number of doctors is increasing within a year, but the instruments that are needed to the professionals are not and the doctors are not in sync," he said, adding that's where the mismatch lies.

Baguio realized that when he served as health secretary during the Aquino administration.

"Doctors in the provinces were looked upon as leaders and so they remained through the job," he said.

They were expected to be managers in the public health delivery system, management organizations in private institutions but their background and training dealt with how to treat the illness or the disease, not ways of thinking in public health.

The Ateneo, founded in 1862, is one of the oldest Jesuit schools of higher learning in Asia. Its most distinguished alumnae is national hero Jose Rizal who graduated in 1877 and went on to become a nationalist hero.

It had three sets of higher education: the Loyola Schools in Quezon City (College of the Immaculate, Social Sciences, Sciences and Engineering and the U.S. Development School of Management), the Professional Schools in Makati (Cebuano Schools of Business and Government and the Law School), and the Ateneo (Health, the Medical Arts School, and the Arts School).

Inaugurated last Friday, the Ateneo is one of the Jesuit schools in the Philippines. It is one of the Jesuit schools in the Philippines. It is one of the Jesuit schools in the Philippines.

Doctor of the future

In a prospectus, the Ateneo said it aims "to mold the physicians of the future: one who is able to understand diseases, a physician, a manager and a social activist." It wants to train not just doctors but doctors who can be leaders and agents of change for systems and structures.

changes in the health sector.

So it is not enough that Ateneo students learn the basics of medicine and surgery, said President Jose U. Mendieta, a veteran development worker.

Ateneo incorporates the study of management principles with an understanding of the social dimensions that affect public health.

It defines the Ateneo doctor as the "doctor of the future" and though that future may just be around the corner.

The doctor of the future must be an outstanding clinician with mastery of clinical skills and a heart for the community. The doctor must be a dynamic manager who can bring systems and resources together to enable solutions to practice their craft.

The doctor must be a social activist, a competent leader who can help address the systemic problems of health and poverty and make quality healthcare available and seeking for all.

Each student has mentor

"We want them to serve, to lead. They will undergo leadership formation. Each student has a mentor," said Mendieta.

Most of the Ateneo's first batch of 75 students are graduates of the Ateneo's U.S. School of Management and have a bachelor's degree in health or science.

"There are very bright kids," said Mendieta, adding that several of them were already working in health care when they decided to transfer to the Ateneo to continue their education.

Tailor-made for export

Baguio, an Ateneo who studied medicine at the University of the Philippines, recalls speaking at his alma mater and saying that he had become a nursing area for doctors "tailor-made to be exported abroad."

"We do not expect all our graduates to end up in the rural areas of serving the poor," said Baguio.

That is not the ultimate goal for it would not be surprising if they were to end up in the rural areas of serving the poor, said Baguio.

Statement of the PHILIPPINE COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS on the Cheaper Medicine Bill

The PHILIPPINE COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS (PCP) fully supports the spirit behind the Cheaper Medicine Bill. The PCP's support includes measures to ensure full implementation of the Generics Law for the purpose of providing cheaper but safe and efficacious drugs. PCP recognizes that availability of affordable drugs helps the patient comply with the physician's medical treatment.

As responsible physicians, PCP supports prescribing the least costly drug if therapeutic efficacy and safety are not compromised. Patients go to their physicians with full confidence that they marshal their medical education, skill and experience in providing the best treatment for a given set of clinical circumstances. The patient-doctor relationship is sacred and cannot be undermined by legislation. The physician is ultimately responsible for the care of the patient; the choice and/or selection of the appropriate drug must remain under the physician's control.

In supporting government efforts to bring down the cost of medications, the PCP urges legislators and health policy makers to put in place adequate safeguards for the purpose of protecting patients and preventing "practice of medicine at-the-drugstore-counter".

First, the law should recognize that therapeutic equivalence, palatability and safety differ among the various brands of a prescribed drug which can significantly affect patient compliance and treatment success.

Second, we lack the infrastructure to ensure drug safety and efficacy. In the course of technical working group and committee hearings, it was universally recognized – even by the most tenacious adherents of cheap medicine laws – that the Bureau of Food and Drug (BFAD) seriously lacks the capacity to deal with testing for safety, therapeutic and bioequivalence, and post-marketing surveillance. This is a serious issue that must be addressed by provisions of the bill.

It is not enough that drugs are affordable; it is absolutely necessary that they should be safe. Implementation of the law should be subject to a moratorium until the medical profession and health consumer advocates are confident of the BFAD's capability. Towards this end, legislation should ensure that BFAD's budget is adequate to fill necessary expansion in capacity, personnel and equipment.

Third, while the bill addresses the issue of drug pricing through a pricing council, parallel importation and amendments to the generic act, the law must likewise provide for a Drug Quality Council composed of representatives from major medical societies and other stakeholders. Again, it must be recognized that pricing, efficacy and safety go hand in hand.

Ultimately, legal responsibility for the patient's treatment rests with the physician. If those safety measures are not put in place and unqualified substitution is allowed, then the law cannot hold the physician responsible for adverse consequences. Thus, the law must include a provision shielding physicians from administrative, criminal or civil suits for adverse effects of substitutions beyond their control. Therapeutic decisions reached by physicians are based on a complex body of medical information relevant to a specific patient. It is not denied that therapeutic failure or toxicity may result from improper substitution of a drug at the pharmacy counter.

More importantly, it should be recognized that the adoption of the provision of the bill in its current form seriously puts at risk and undermines the patient-doctor relationship, which is founded on trust. Inadequate and inappropriate drug responses and adverse reactions to prescribed medications that are substituted at the drugstore level may complicate medical management, and erode the patient's confidence with his physician.

The PCP's support for efforts to bring down the cost of medicines is unqualified, but these concerns must first be addressed to ensure the proper implementation of the law. We urge Congress to incorporate these positive steps for the purpose of providing confidence in physician compliance with the law. We see no reason why physicians should not fully embrace the law if safety and efficacy concerns are fully addressed while availing of affordable medicines. In the final analysis, any effort to ensure access to cheaper drugs must likewise fulfill that ancient dictum, "Primum non nocere."

It's Sampras over Federer

MUBADALA—PETE SAMPRAS FIRED OFF HIS trademark powerful serve in a shock upset of world number one Roger Federer in Mubadala on Saturday to post his first win in their three-game exhibition series.

The former U.S. world champion came back strongly after defeat in Seoul and Osaka, leading the first break of the match in the sixth game of the second set and serving out for victory in sets 7-6 (10-8), 6-4 in 70 minutes.

The win, the first set in a rematch after a right-offer that had gone with a narrow light rain-out.

Sampras, 30, won the first of the set in the first match was high.

"I was very hot out there, very quick on the ball," he said. "I was hitting my serve pretty well. I was getting a little bit today and it would have been a little bit better in the first set." The 20-year-old Federer pressed his opponents away, saying he could compete at the top level in the world.

"No doubt, a great level of play. Miñoza really did a nice job today but the match was really quick and I was playing really well and I was making my mistakes," he said. Sampras, who won a record 14 Grand Slam titles, started the match strongly with his heavy serve, hitting two aces in the first game and never losing a set.

Federer, currently on 12 Grand Slam titles, had won six previous set wins in the match, but Sampras escaped and made his second set point.

Both players hit 14 aces during the match. Sampras made 15 Grand Slam titles in the first set, while Federer won 14 points in the second set.

Their clash in the packed arena at Mubadala "wasn't new" but both made it to just five days, following the meetings in Seoul and Shanghai.

The second clash, in Osaka, Japan, on Thursday, was a closer affair over 100 minutes, with Federer emerging victorious after saving four set points in the fourth.

Some enchanted evening

By page 11

The landmark Hollywood sign on the mountains in Hollywood is the centerpiece of the event.

On World Premier night, I got two Hollywood prizes. I got into my private party but not the Disney store. I should have seen my wings and crown. What would Cinderella do?

The crowd here felt like to be in the Disney store. I heard of the hall with all my photographs. No castles were needed since the theme was only a block away.

Our group from Little Gabe was in the lobby by the entrance. I was in Hollywood, accompanied by my lovely wife Janet.

Getting to the Disney was a way to see the store. Just like in "Cinderella," where the Disney princesses Gabe pops up in the middle of New York, I had to walk on Hollywood Boulevard in my own background group, which seemed to be a multi-stopper.

He thanks to our couple in Hollywood, who helped with my wings and crown, we finally made it to the 10 Captain The area.

The actual red carpet is open to the public, lined by a multitude of cameras with flashes popping everywhere. VIP guests and showbiz personalities were everywhere. It was like the pages of "Oscar" in life.

With all this, the movie itself was not cinematic. It was amazing that the Hollywood scene unfolded over in the midst of the film, not only when the final credits rolled.

The real Hollywood Experience was at the after party with all the premiere of Disney World guests. They were so happy to pose with me. The rest of the guests asked which part of the movie I was in, to which I answered, "The sequel."

"Cinderella's" costume designer Maria Play was delighted with my outfit and asked who made my gown. There was another winning moment for her—conductor Hugo Lomax, who usually just exhibited the same gown he made for me during the finale of "Cinderella's."

Perhaps he will follow Monique Lhuillier's footsteps in Hollywood.

Gracie for my full ensemble was also in jewelry designer Janet Thapa, who had me a lovely program event. His new shop in Hollywood is full of his magnificent pieces and his Miss Earth crown can be shown up as request.

Also, Monique Capelle contributed a pearl and crystal accessory, my bag was a blue bubble creation, my hair eye-lashes were like diamonds and my hair color was recreated by Gabe Thomas.

Gracie, that's almost as long as the film itself!

The great end for the Disney Enthusiast Experience was filled with Disney activities, from costume contests to games and driving and rock climbing. The store will be open until Jan. 4, so my readers heading to the area could find some cheap merchandise for their kids.

Thanks to the very well-organized and influential Susan and Janet, I was introduced to all the stars at the after party. My evening highlight was

Just before the "McQueen" of "Gabe's" starline, I was most excited to have my photo taken with him. He even joked that I must have had some suit case to fit all the way from the Philippines looking like that.

And now I'm finally back home, fresh from the action-packed of Australia and armed with the usual movie premiere bag bags filled with my wings, crown and Gabe.

And it's great to be back in my own big city, with not even bright lights, not even headlines to read and not even bad weather. Happy ever after, indeed!

David K. was instantly captivated by her beauty, pale, cool eyes. But he knew even he would never see her again since he thought she was probably just visiting from New York.

"Three two weeks later, like a dream, I was back again at a design studio where my main company was a participant," he recalled. "At that time I said I had modified the method and approach too. I am so glad I did, because five years have been too long married to me."<sup>2</sup>

This recently explained to me how she felt about her love, life and wedding, daughters. "David and I prayed and waited for a ceremony, tradition and memorable wedding. Only after did we fully realize, how loving our

"The wedding was an amusing experience," she said. "We had it at the English garden, but had breakfast at Santa Monica garden. The solemn and moving ceremony was officiated by our church pastor, Rev. Douglas."

"We had the very talented Hickson [husband] and his team to do our hair and styling. He surrounded my head in cottons and especially myself into a symphony of problems. David's mom [Gaille K.] and our close friends, Denise, Monique and Sheri [Patterson], coordinated with all our suppliers. Everything ran so smoothly," she continued. "This moment, as if by magic, produced a perfect bouquet of my dream (out of mind, out of trouble) while parents, polished and wrapped to fulfill all their wishes and hopes were in less time than I had imagined!"

She adds, "My dear friend, the original second-story greenhouse, designed by our masterful building guru, which had to be torn out to be reconstructed and reinforced, has made far more different babies in varying shades of neutral tones, which included 25 yards of shingles, six tons of dry rot, and 100 loads of lime! ## Tutoring with a difference

BY RENE R. JARABERO

SUCCESS COMES IN MANY forms. But whether it is winning the top place in the spelling bee competition or studying and grabbing the role for a school play, it is driven by one force: confidence.

It was in high school confidence that drove a child, who had consistently struggled in school, to achieve a perfect score on the SAT.

"He was in 8th grade when he got the SAT score. He was in 8th grade when he got the SAT score. He was in 8th grade when he got the SAT score."

Tutoring Club offers a unique learning system that guarantees to improve a child's skills to at least one full grade level each 30 hours of tutoring. In the Philippines, it has branches in 10-15 City 26-32, Bantay High School, Bantay High School, Bantay High School, Bantay High School, Bantay High School, Bantay High School, Bantay High School, Bantay High School, Bantay High School, Bantay High School.

OVERSIGHT

"If the child comes here once to two times per week, you'll see him up there grade level in four to six months," Jarabero said.

By the time the child reaches high school, his confidence will be so high that he will be able to stand out in the class, a normal child will be in an increasingly competitive environment but his attitude toward learning that, together with his confidence, will make him a success.

Traditional tutoring

The problem with traditional tutoring is the teacher. In the case of Tutoring Club, the teacher is the child's parent, who is usually a parent. what came but never really understood the concept," said Jarabero. "But when you simply put, a kid will learn the 'how' but not the 'why'."

Such assurance, a diagnostic test is required upon enrollment, and Jarabero. The test will present the child with a problem and determine the student's level of academic performance. A college student at the Ateneo de Manila University continued Jarabero, even had a Math 101 of a month's grade. But as Jarabero said, she cannot get a passing grade in her college algebra subject.

"If you cannot solve 2/3 divided by 1/4, there's no way you can do Algebra. The diagnostic test will identify your problem. Everything else that you have to do is just to solve it. So you're not just a student, you're a student who can solve it."

Diagnostic

Tutoring Club has devised a computer system that analyzes a child's information and offers off a personal lesson plan based on the child's pace and capacity to learn skills at a time. The system then monitors when the computer said.

With the computer and Tutor, however, we make up the large lesson with the student. If the student needs to go back a bit, we the computer can specifically identify his/her weakness and struggle in a particular subject, then the tutor repeats the lesson until the student is ready to move up.

Whether a student is low average or above average, Jarabero said, Tutoring Club has a systematic approach that sets a low or a high bar, says its founder. Because there is no pressure at all to make a problem quickly is possible.

"Normally, most of the students who are normally confident in their own ability, but they are not confident in their own ability."

Jarabero founded the Tutoring Club more than 20 years ago when he was a student at the University of the Philippines. Although he had a degree in engineering, it was a requirement to have a student body to have a degree in engineering. Jarabero said.

Do Pinoys read at all?

By Queenie N. Lee-Chua

HERE IS THE MOST POPULAR book read outside of schools by Filipinos? No, it is not Harry Potter, but the Bible. According to the 2007 National Book Development Board (NBDB) Readership Survey, 57 percent of respondents across the country read the Bible the most, followed by romance or love novels (32 percent), cookbooks (28 percent), comic books (26 percent) and religious or inspirational works (23 percent).

Other relatively popular book categories in 2007 are, in this order: fiction, science (in its different), humor and suspense, family planning, business, sports and fitness, health and medicine, government, law, education, geography, history, animals, child rearing, social issues, and biographies.

Early this year, the NBDB commissioned the publisher National Book Store to do a second Readership Survey. The first was done in 2002. There were 1,200 respondents, 300 each from the NCR, Ilocos, the Visayas, and Mindanao. Respondents answered detailed questions about their reading habits, preferences, attitudes and behavior. It was a pioneering landmark survey for the NBDB.

Decline in reading

First, the bad news. Generally, the survey shows that reading has largely declined in our nation, with only 52 percent of respondents saying they read down two percent from 2003. The reading of books, comics, newspapers, and magazines has gone down, by seven, 13, 14, and 11 percent, respectively.

Why the decline? One reason is the National Capital Region (NCR). Surprisingly, the NCR is the only cluster in the country which reading has declined, by five percent. In Ilocos and Mindanao, reading has actually increased by two percent, and in the Visayas, readers have held steady.

Despite the proliferation of book stores, publishers, and libraries in the NCR, book readers have decreased by a whopping 14 percent, from 55 percent in 2003 to 41 percent in 2007. Magazine readers in the NCR have increased by 23 percent, comic readers by 11 percent, and newspaper readers by 11 percent.

But there is good news elsewhere. In the Visayas, general readership has increased by four percent. Readers of books in the Visayas increased by 11 percent, comics readers, by 18 percent, magazine readers, by one percent. Newspaper readers have decreased by three percent.

It is interesting to note that NBDB has done a lot of intervention programs in the Visayas, such as the Bookland Community Reading Activities, which may possibly have contributed in part for the increase.

Reading to the youth

The youth are leading the way. They start to read non-school books at age 20, on average, one year earlier than in 2003. Again, NCR is the poor exception—youth people here start reading non-school books at age 18 on average, four years later than the national norm.

Unfortunately, reading has declined across all age groups, except again for the youth, those in the 18 to 24 age bracket, where the percentage of readers has in fact gone up. There this means that we need less, as we grow older? Nope not.

Reading has also declined across all socioeconomic groups, except those in the 4th class. Public school students read and borrow books, newspapers, magazines, and comics than they did in 2003, and so do private school respondents, the slight increase in reading today is only among these reading circles.

It is not universal of urban regions, however, compared to urban regions in the rural areas. This may be explained by the lack of access to reading materials in areas far from city centers.

Reading behavior

They read anytime they want. Interestingly, reading non-school books is not stable for most people, except for some who read before going to sleep. The number of books read in the past year is somewhat average.

An average of seven books a year is not too bad, but what is alarming is the median number of books read, which is a low three. This means that even if half the adult population of the Philippines have read three or more non-school books in the past year, the other half have read only one three, or none, or less than all.

Why do we read? More than 40 percent of the respondents read to catch up on knowledge or increase their skills. The top reason for enjoyment almost half of the readers read books for pleasure and fun, while the other half read books for work and learning.

However, the majority of the respondents, whether they read or not, have few books at home. More than

A national survey shows that reading has declined, with Metro Manilans reading less and less and pulling the rest of the nation down the road to illiteracy

Every person here has at most only five books at their homes.

Why? It helps more readers prefer to read media other than print, such as the Internet. Perhaps when they are only in the mood for entertainment, such as TV, they do not want to read.

The survey does not analyze the reasons why, but the reasons from other areas recommendations. "The challenge is for bookstores and publishers, printers and paper and ink manufacturers, to make more books affordable, the government can encourage this, as well as the financing of technology upgrade to make operations more efficient and economical."

Others are also challenged to write more books, not just to entertain, but also to inform, to teach the readers skills or to convey to them practical knowledge. Community libraries should encourage adults and non-school youth to use reading books, and ultimately, to teach students to read longer materials, such as books.

The NBDB will present the 2007 Readership Survey results to the public on Nov. 28, 9 a.m. to 12 noon, at the University Station in Ortigas Center, Pasig City. Publishers, reading associations, educators, and other stakeholders are encouraged to attend. For more details, call the NBDB at 5559991-2.

Accreditation for pioneering school

THE BEACON SCHOOL HAS become the first educational institution in the Philippines to receive accreditation from the International Accreditation Organization (IAO) in Switzerland to offer the Middle Years Program (IMYP) Grades 6-10.

With the recognition received from IAO, the Beacon School, an IBO World School, has been authorized to offer the IMYP and is fully authorized educational institution in the Philippines accredited at every level of its academic programs by the IAO.

The accreditation was also achieved in record time.

Beacon's Primary Years Program (PYP) P5-Grade 5 was accredited in 2004.

The pioneering 7-year-old school is an independent, non-profit, co-educational K-12 school. Its curriculum is based on the International Baccalaureate (IB) framework.

Beacon is committed to providing a global education of the highest quality centered on a well-balanced of academic, cultural and extracurricular activities.

Seal laughs off Heidi's 'package' comment

ALL ABOUT portraying Heidi Klum as Seal's ex-wife and was impressed.

LOS ANGELES—HERE WAITING for our turn to interview Seal at a hotel villa, a lady circled near our feet. As we said "hi" to the boy, a woman in jeans, sans makeup, picked him up.

It was Heidi Klum, of course, being a very old room that afternoon while her husband was holding one-on-one interviews down stairs in the villa's living room. Away from the Klums' front room and the "Project Runway" set, Seal looked surprisingly simple.

Add singer to the German model's credentials. In "Spencer," Seal's first music album in four years, the singer with her husband in "Sitting Dug" shares his story on the morning they were married in 2005. The song is based on his on-stage couple among couples and a wedding and anniversary parties. "I love her sing to the house all the time," said the German-singing musician, who was changed on a note, he boomed her up on the other side. "She is a talent. I am so proud that she is mine in this."

"Did you watch 'Oasis'?" asked the man whose most popular song is "Rise from a Rose," the classic song from "Instantaneous." He replied that he did not watch the episode where he and Heidi greeted. We returned from that all the more excited, highly lighted the part where his wife told the world about using his "package" for the first time. "I will tell you why," he said with a laugh. "That is true."

For those who missed the surprising moment in "The Spanish Whiskey Show's" history, here was what much reportedly said about using Seal to describe "No one came to the girls and I was sitting there, and I was like, 'Wow.' And I pretty much was everything. The whole package."

When asked if the moment, "She was on her knees and I was on the floor," the man was laughing about all the time.

"I think one day, what about his wife?" "One day when I was only 3 years old I was very used to this album," the father proudly
